In Memoriam

Perry Dunlap Smith

"Purpose he had, without doubt, and an end in view, but not axioms, postulates or formulae, for the end in view was as complex as man himself."

"For him there was no standard model of a child or of a man. Each was to make and to be his own model. He sought to impose nothing on us, not even freedom. But we knew this was what he wanted for us."

Lynn A. Williams, 1967

And understanding
We honor Frank Wallace

BICYCLES

The bicycles lie
In the woods, in the dew.
Between the birch trees
The highroad gleams.

They fell, fell down
Mudguard to mudguard,
Handlebar to handlebar
Pedal to pedal.

And you can't
Wake them up!
Petrified monsters,
Their chains entwined.

Huge and surprised
They stare at the sky.
Above them, green dusk
Resin, and bumblebees.

In the luxurious
Rustling of camomile, peppermint
Leaves they lie. Forgotten,
Asleep, asleep.

Andrei Voznesensky

He keeps them, like an ape, in the corner of his jaw; first mouthed, to be last swallowed.

One night Santa Claus jumped down from his sleigh
To deliver all the toys for Christmas day.
His nose was red,
He wore a hat
He wasn't lean, he was short and fat,
And he looked and he looked for the Christmas tree
And he said to himself, "I hope no one sees me."
Then all of a sudden, the children woke up,
They gave him hot chocolate in a beautiful cup
And he said to the children,
"Thank you for the chocolate, and now I must go Back to my hideout on a hill with the snow
And as he rode off, they hear a "Ho-Ho-Ho, and a Merry Christmas.

Thanksgiving Day

This story is about Thanksgiving in 1990. With the help of modern equipment the amount of shopping the Martin's had to do was limited. The first thing Mark did that morning was to watch the Johnson City Parade on TV. After that Mark had his breakfast which had Kellogg's Sugar Toasties (they came out about 1972), bran muffins, grapefruit, cake and milk. At ten o'clock Mark's father took him to a football game between San Diego State and Johnson City University. When Mark came home he had a bowl of caracus (a combination of carrots and asparagus) soup and crackers. Then Mark watched the Lilly Bowl Parade on TV. After that they had friends over and with their rented turkey making machine that in the machine has the ingredients for 1 to 5 turkeys, all you do is press the number of turkeys you want. They had a giant turkey with cornbeans. After that they watched another parade on TV. Finally the guests went home and that ends another Thanksgiving.

Howie Sinker

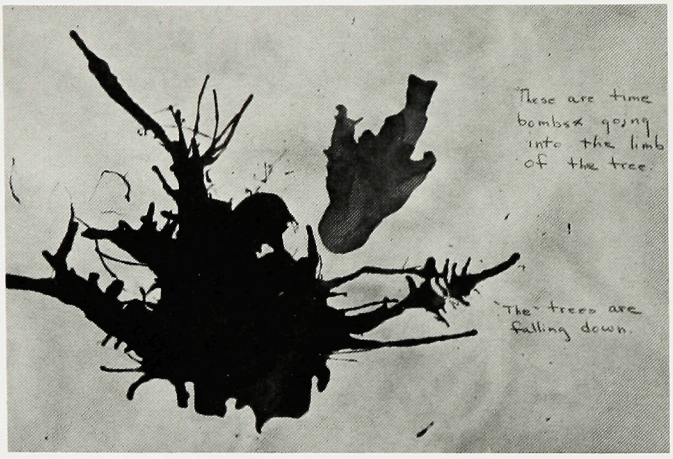

In 1966 Thanksgiving day is on Nov. 24, 1966. On Thanksgiving day in 1620, the pilgrims landed in Plymouth, Massachusetts. Plymouth is also a gasa-mobile. This Thanksgiving we'll be doing very many pilgrimage things. We'll have fun with glory.

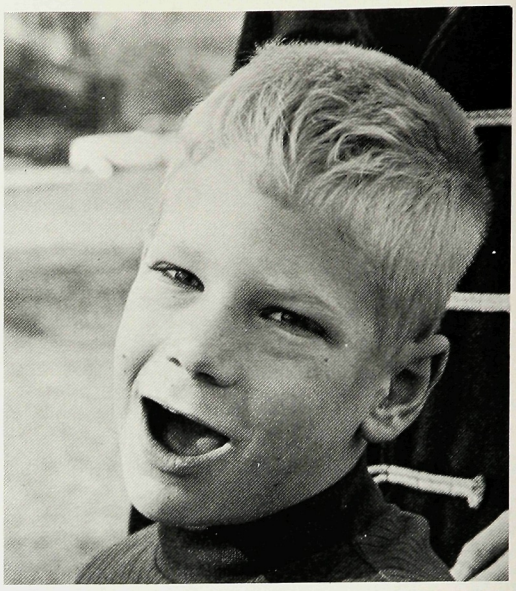

The Lord's Prayer

Our father who are in heaven,
Hallowed be thy name.
Thy kingdom come,
Thy will be done,
On earth as it is in heaven.
Give us this day our daily bread,
And forgive us our debts,
As we forgive our debtors.
And lead us not into temtation,
But deliver us from evil,
For thine is the kingdom, and the power,
and the glory forever.

I woke up and was in a monstrously rebellious mood. I put on my Saturday winter clothes rapidly not really caring what the hell I wore. I devoured my soggy corn flakes holding my nose in disgust, swung open the heavy wooden door and plunged definantly up to my waist in the alabastrine, immaculate snow.

HELLO

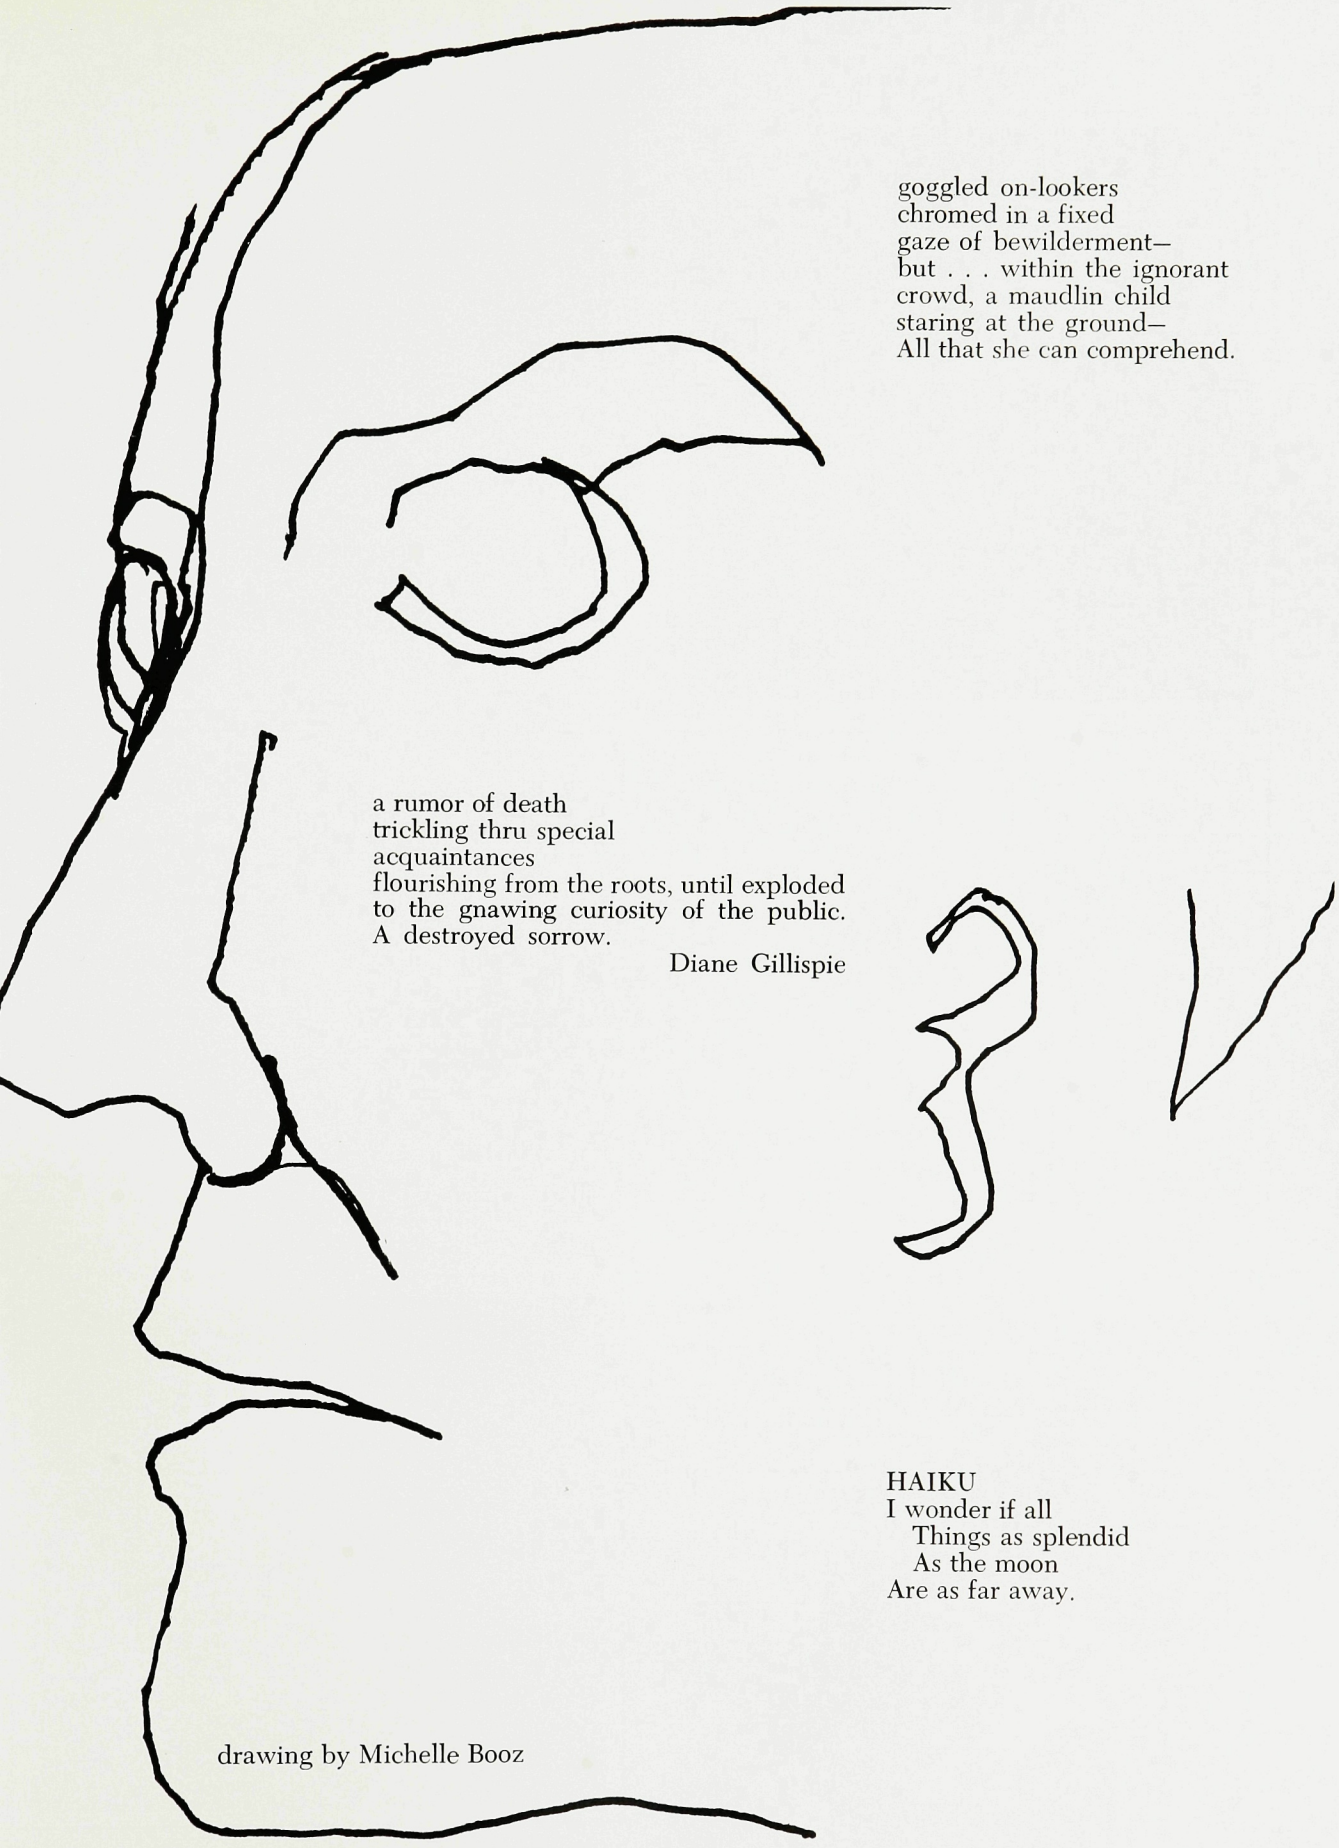

How odd, it's over.
Suddenly
My feelings have been switched off.
And have survived intact
tearless.
And, so to speak
relatively happy
or something.
But probably not
in actuality.
Dissociated again.
And all the hushed
and feared and terrifying
Conjecturings are nothing
or something
But probably not
in actuality.

Of life and death
Of the immediate and the unforseeable eternity
Commingled with blood and lust
Seeking some value but Finding only depravity
Amongst the flaccid fleshy forms
Of creatures which
Mean nothing and are nothing
Seeking the mere corruption of comfort
Gazing at the garbage heap
Of cast off virtues and inhibitions lost
Confused by pleasures past which Felt and seemed and were but
Are no more but Offer still a Tempting Tryst and the
Naive denial of involvement
Offering in lieu
Comfort to everchanging cells
Which pulse and grow and expand
Only to die
To die, to sleep, to live
No more
The eternal peace
A lash of being
To exist
No more
And to have done much less Without marks made in
The surging rat-race world
Save for the remains
In the bodies of others

I imagine you are near.
I imagine that you lie next to me
You're there to talk to.
You're close to hold on to.
Your eyes are so near mine
I can see my tears
Tears that make me realize
You're so far away you
Could never realize how much I long for you.

I watch the sun settling carelessly in the west and imagine it caressing you there, as I long to do.
Perhaps you watch it rise in the east, and you imagine, too.

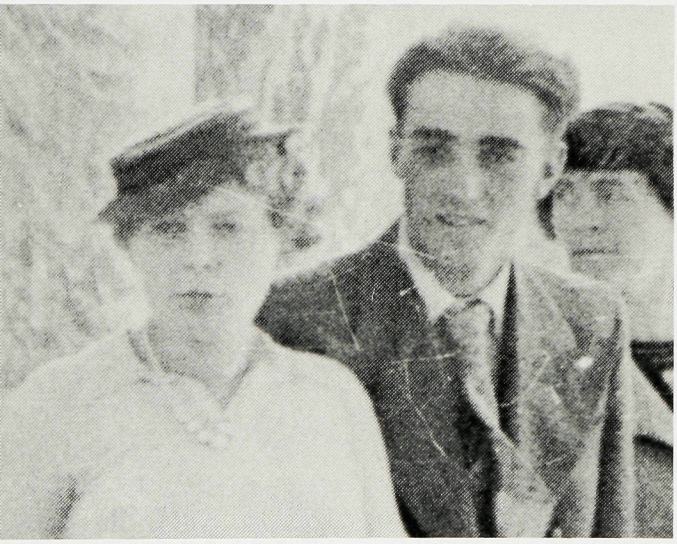

When the sun is down, I wish it was up, so that I needn't spend another night longing for you, alone.
When the sun is up, I wish it was down, so that I might dream of your blue eyes, alone.

What is it so transforms the boulevard?
The lure of the passerby is not of the flesh;
There are no movements; there are flowing

And I have no need of eyes to see them there.

Space in communion binds us in one thought.

Frustration is having a friend home from school and not being able to talk. Frustration is not being able to say "Merry Christmas" to a nice person who is friendly on a street corner. Frustration is not being to scream out the older year and welcome the new. Frustration is not being able to order a chocolate milkshake at MacDonalds. Frustration is not being able to tell Meg Delaney and Barb Haight that Berkeley is a good school.

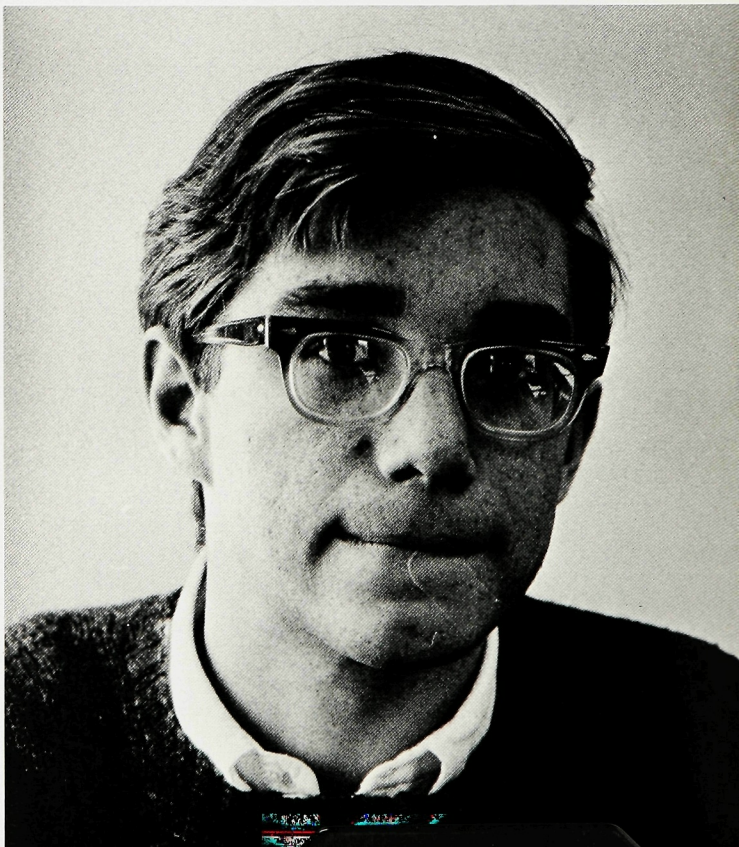

Happiness is not having to answer your mother when she tells you it's time to get up. Happiness is not having to talk to dull people who always have so many words but nothing to say. Happiness is not having to answer the telephone when you are in the middle of the murder in a James Bond book. Happiness is being able to swear at someone and not have them know.

In conclusion, Happiness and Frustration are a state of mind. And I am ----------.

Time has gone too quickly for me at North Shore. I'd like to stretch it out. It will soon be memories . . . football practices and games, yelling at basketball games, afternoons in the art room, Ensemble, individualism and independence all around me and within me, and freedom . . . .

My pride in North Shore will go with me.

It is the fate of man to be forever alone and isolated. True understanding and empathy between two beings does not exist. Our relationships with others are limited, yet what else is of value? I find that I am thoroughly disenchanted with democracy, myself, and materialistic objects. I have found myself incapable of love for all but one and in this single triumph I revel. Often times I want to end this meaningless existence, to destroy the body that supports my mind, but stop because I realize that for a few microseconds I have been able to transcend the restrictions of my flesh and feel a truly deep attachment to another. Eventually I will erase myself from this jungle, but until that time I intend to live as much as is possible and to drink in every moment of life as though it were my last.

In my high school experience, which is vast, there were two moments that loomed frightening and hallowed in the future—senior spot and graduation. Now only the latter remains. The loss of my senior spot I now receive as a mixed blessing and possibly fate. The essence of it was a philosophy of life in school such that by weighing each day's good points with its bad and so each week, each month, and each year, thus arriving at a mathematical judgement, I find my whole high school experience to be a draw. A veritable stale-mate. I do look forward to the time when I will be able to unlearn most of what N.S. has taught me about living in a society. I also look forward to a return next Christmas to see friends in next year's class. As for my own class, I can only say that for the friends I've made I'm grateful. Ray Bradbury

John Cadwalader Menk, Jr.

Regrets, remorse, repentance are only yesterday's joys viewed in retrospect.

André Gide

Somehow Sunday morning always comes.

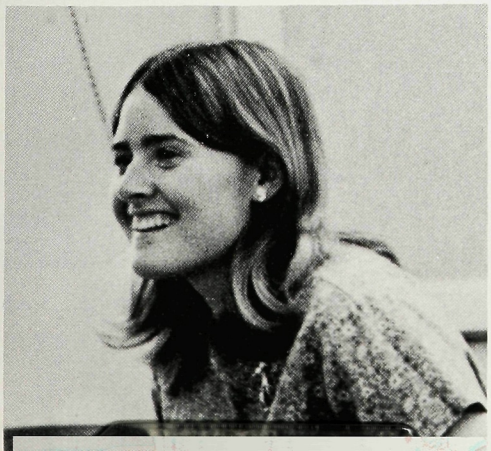

Manan Dietzgen

She's not to blame for G.A.A. She perenially tries to shrug her flapping G.A.A. banner. One hears her quiet peep in study hall or disgustedly leaves the noisy senior girl's room. But she's a grind only about coffee. Successfully she has lived down the Dietzgen's legasy at North Shore.

Why live such grief over again that time has gone for us?

Aeschylus

Kyoji Nakano

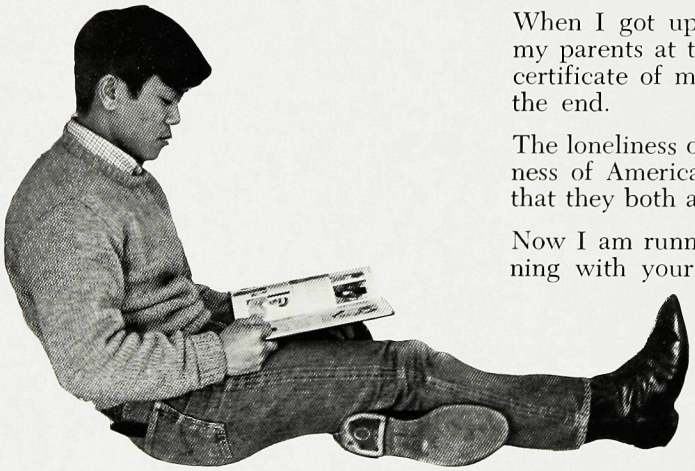

Will you give your attention for my speech for a moment. That was the summer of the year when I was in the twelfth grade of high school. I was a member of the rugby team, but I wanted to participate in field and track events, and I wanted to know my ability. I participated in race about two miles and three and a half miles race and bent all my energy. But I was tired after two miles race, and it was scorchingly hot—When I approached first lap. Conscious was hardly. I was running blindly. I don't remember what happened after race; sound of ambulance, a white wall, smell of medicine . . .

When I got up after a long time sleeping, I saw my parents at the side of my bed, and they had a certificate of merit of first for me. I ran. I ran to the end.

The loneliness of a marathon runner and the loneliness of American life are the same. But I believe that they both are wonderful goals.

Now I am running to believe that. And I am running with your kindness. Thank you very much!

He found a door in a wall; but it was locked, and there was no room for a fat little rabbit to squeeze underneath.

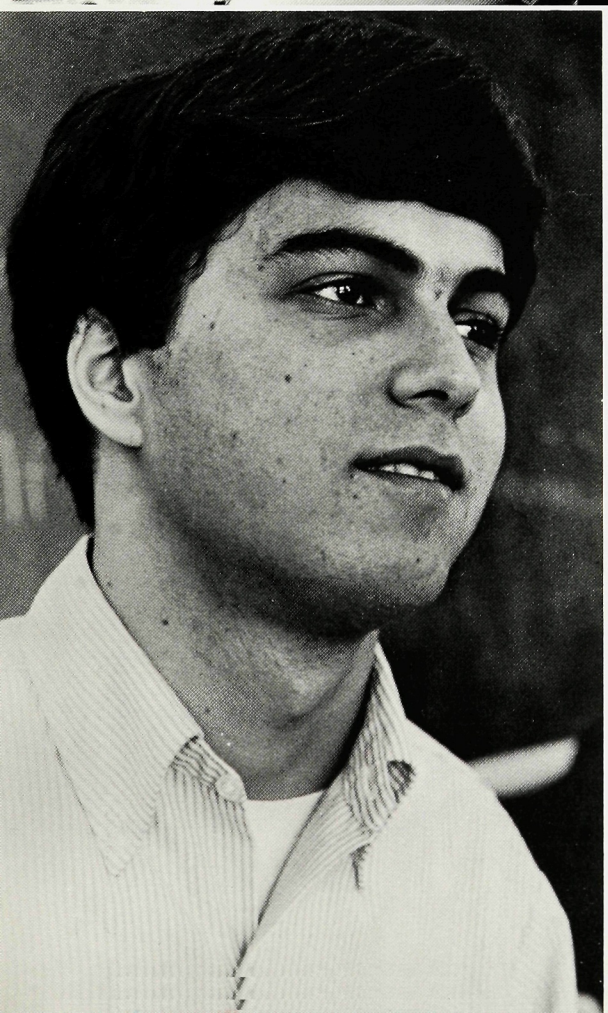

Ann Christine Gougler

We are now in a period of crisis. Every man who is acutely alive is acutely wrestling with his own soul. The people that can bring forth the new passion, the new idea, this people will endure. Those others, that fix themselves in the old idea, will perish with the new life strangled within them. Men must speak out to one another.

D. H. Lawrence

James Spencer Marcus

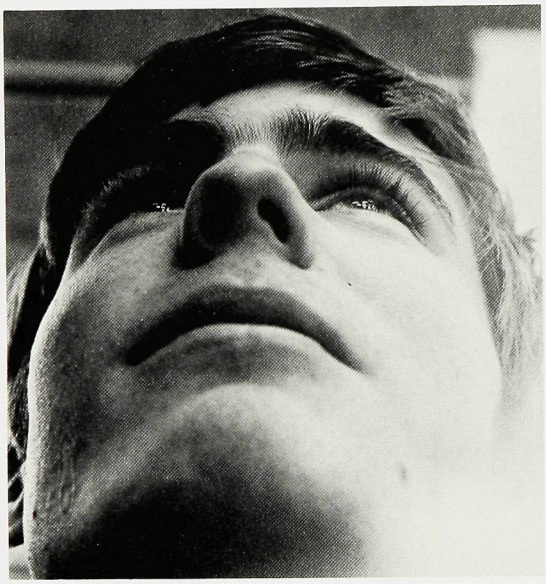

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times,
it was the age of wisdom, it was the age
of foolishness,
it was the epoch of belief, it was the epoch
of incredulity,
it was the season of light, it was the season
of darkness,
it was the spring of hope, it was the winter
of despair,
we had everything before us, be had nothing before us . . .

Charles Dickens

Skeets Hyde Millard

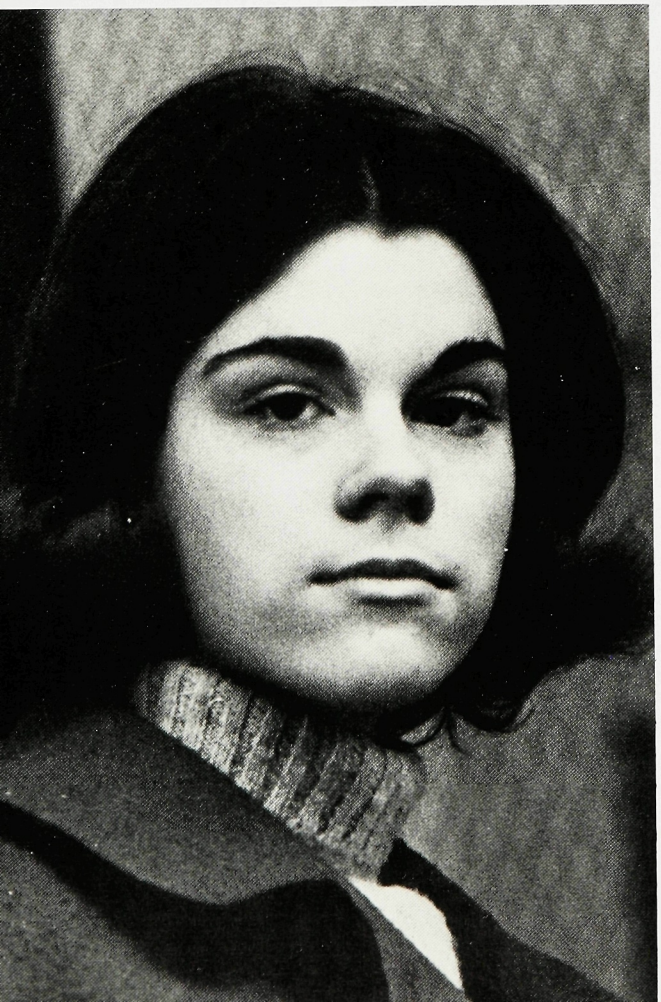

The neat thing about being a little kid is that you get to get off the ship first.

Anonymous Iamblichi
501-442 B.C.

I'd like to take this space to thank Frank Wallace for his invisible moustache; Richard Lacey for his expertise in Judo; Jack Loomis for whatever's happening, baby; Mayor Daley for Chicago; and Fritz Bransfield for being so tough.

Barbara Lindsay Haight

Uncompromising realism tempered by strong sentiments. A traditionalist with contemporary overtones. Impatience with mediocrity. Insatiable curiosity about the world and its happenings. Ability to make the most commonplace humorous. Perceptive, candid, and sensitive. Likes history, Fauve paintings, long walks, Barbara Tuchman, and Paris.

Dislikes pretense, slow reactions, math, and pseudos. Self-sufficiency personified.

Look! Up in the sky! It's a bird! It's a plane! No, it's SUPER-CLASS. The Class of '67, who came to school with brains and abilities far beyond those of common clods. SUPER-CLASS, who can change the course of mighty curriculums, bend problems with their bare hands, and enter college in a single bound. And who, disguised as mild-mannered idiots of a great surburban asylum, fight a never-ending battle for money, success, and true happiness in life.

Fred and Ethel Senior, 1987.

A ROCK, A TREE, A CLOUD

Play adapted by Linda Breuer from a story by Carson McCullers.

"Son, I can love anything. No longer do I have to think about it, even. I see a street full of people and a beautiful light comes in me. I watch a bird in the sky or I meet a traveler on the road. No longer do I have to think about it, even. Everything, Son, and everybody. All stranger and all loved."

TEEN-AGE TEN COMMANDMENTS

1. Stop and think before you drink.
2. Don't let your parents down, they brought you up.
3. Be humble enough to obey. You will be giving orders yourself some day.
4. At the first moment turn away from unclean thinking.
5. Don't show off when driving. If you want to race, go to Indianapolis.
6. Choose a date who would make a good mate.
7. Go to church faithfully. The Creator gives us a week. Give Him back at least an hour.
8. Choose your companions carefully. You are what they are.
9. Avoid following the crowd. Be an engine, not a caboose.
10. Keep the original Ten Commandments.
